Course Information

- Spring Term (December 15- January 7th)
- Course Description
 - This course is designed to be an introduction to Juvenile Delinquency. We will focus on the functioning and process of the juvenile justice system and explore the historical foundations and contemporary juvenile justice system. We will assess how juvenile crime is measured, examine various theories of delinquency, and identify pathways and risk factors of delinquency. Finally, we will examine potential solutions to delinquency, weigh the costs and benefits of these various actions, and discuss how to rehabilitate youths committing low level and serious and chronic offenses. To achieve these objectives, I have chosen a textbook that focuses attention on pathways and prevention of juvenile delinquency.
- Prerequisite: None

Upon Completion of this Course, students will be able to:

- Describe and apply key operational terms and concepts of the juvenile justice courts and juvenile justice process.
- Identify how the history of juvenile justice in the United States has been a series of distinct stages.

- Describe how the data on juvenile crime and victimization are collected and identify its strengths as well as limitations in discerning an accurate profile of youthful offending.
- Understand the theoretical issues and differences used in explaining crime and delinquency.
- Describe the common risk factors that increase the likelihood of youth engaging in delinquency and becoming involved with the juvenile court.
- Evaluate the effectiveness of preventative programming for key delinquency risks and the desired outcomes.
- Identify the core principles of effective delinquency prevention for youths committing offenses.

Communication

I often send notices and announcements through Blackboard Ultra to your email accounts, so you will need to be adamant about checking your email. If you ever need to contact me, I am best reached by email and will make every effort to respond within 48 hours (usually sooner). Remember, these are professional correspondences so your emails should have a subject line identifying yourself and the class you are enrolled in, a salutation (Hi Dr. Malone) before the body of the message, and an ending. Emails without the bare minimum may not receive a response.

Online Course Etiquette

The online classroom is a learning environment and an academic community. We all have a special obligation to preserve an atmosphere conducive to the freedom to teach and to learn. I foster a culture of respect that honors the rights, safety, dignity, and worth of every individual to preserve the integrity of each person. For that reason, all members of this community are expected to show courtesy, civility, and respect for one another.

Course content can be complicated, sensitive, quite often controversial, and sometimes emotionally charged, we will encounter different perspectives, theories, and interpretations about various groups and concepts – some you may agree with and others you may have reservations about. However, it is paramount that we be mindful in crafting responses and respect each other's points of view while maintaining a critical but open mind. I encourage and maintain a classroom dynamic that is conducive to honest and open discussions about topics that are sometimes uncomfortable to talk about. This environment of openness is created and maintained when we respect and listen to one another.

Class Participation and Assignments

Given this is a 3-week online, asynchronous course, participation is extremely paramount in your academic success. Thus, it is important that a part of your grade captures your participation in the course. Students are expected to complete assigned readings and assignments by the respective due dates. Failure to do so is considered an absence.

Class participation includes weekly chapter quizzes, discussion forums, and weekly exams. For discussion forums, each student should have an original post responding to the prompt in entirety for full credit. I have detailed instructions on Blackboard Ultra.

Reading Quizzes

In this course, for accountability purposes, there will be weekly reading quizzes for assigned chapters. You have unlimited attempts until the due date.

Discussion Forums

In this course, there will be activities that will include write-ups and discussion forums to help keep students engaged throughout the 8-week course. The write-ups will serve as primers to check for reading and engaging course material. Discussion forums are used for students to engage course material (course readings and documentaries) with each other and the instructor. Each student must write an original post from my initial post and respond to at least two peers' responses. All components should be completed by the due date listed on Blackboard.

Exams

You are responsible for taking 3 exams in this course. Each exam will evaluate you on the material covered directly prior to the exam. Exams are not cumulative. Exams are available through Blackboard Ultra. Approach taking your online exams as if Dr. Malone were right next to you. This means you are to receive no outside assistance nor use notes. You will have 75 minutes to complete the exam. If technical issues arise, please contact me as soon as possible.

Grading Assignments

The grade for this course will be determined according to the following formula:

Attendance and Tardiness

Attendance in our online class is noted by timely submission of assignments. Late submissions are considered absences. However, unexpected events do arise which may prevent you from attending. For this reason, you will be allowed 3 unexcused absences or what I call "self-care" days. All additional unexcused absences will result in a one-letter grade penalty per absence.

There may be occasions (inclement weather or other unforeseen events) when Dr. Malone cancels class and/or TAMUSA is closed. In these events, I will communicate at my soonest convenience to students via email directing you to Blackboard Ultra where alternative coursework will be available.

Late Assignment

All assignments are due by the specified time on Blackboard Ultra. Any assignment turned in after the deadline is considered late and will receive a standard deduction of 10 points. After 1 late day, the assignment will be a "0" unless there is a university excused reason.

Students who do not have a university-excused absence will not be allowed to make up a missed examination. You must have written documentation for the absence and have notified the instructor within 24 hours of the absence to be able to schedule a make-up exam. No exceptions.

Academic Dishonesty/Plagiarism

Academic dishonesty includes any unapproved activity that compromises the integrity of ANY portion of assignments. This includes, but not limited to, cheating, plagiarism (which includes self-plagiarism), or failing to appropriately cite sources. This also includes Artificial Intelligence (AI) generated content, which is not original. Any form of academic dishonesty is incompatible with Texas A&M-San Antonio's mission and generally understood standards of ethical academic behavior.
